This little wasp and his mates are thoroughly enjoying Miss Willmotts ghost! They are not the usual wasps we know in every garden and I believe it to be a Median wasp, more black than yellow, a little smaller and a more compact species. Has anyone any ideas on the subject? I saw it while looking at the eryngium alpinum which is quite a compelling plant at this time of year, particularly spectacular at dusk when it lights up the garden!

Geoff spotted this busy character working its magic on a marigold yesterday, check out his video at www.laceygreen.com/Sections/Hortsoc.php
